

Our Terms and Conditions

For Writers:

- The publication of the written material you submit to us will be at our own free will. We reserve the right to make additions or deletions to the text or graphics prior to publication, or the right to refuse publication.
- By submitting your writing, you grant us a non-exclusive, perpetual, irrevocable, royalty-free, worldwide licence to publish and communicate to the public any material you submit to us in any format, including without limitation print and electronic format. You will be notified of this in each relevant instance.
- All submitted work must be your own original work and you must own the copyright, or any other rights. If you would like to tell us about material that is not yours, please contact us about the owner, in order for us to ask permission to publish.
- We do not accept previously published work from/on other platforms.
- Once we have already published your work, you have the right to allow other parties to publish and communicate the material you submit to us.
- We reserve the right not to accept any material that we consider to be obscene, offensive, illegal, or deliberately intended to upset others. You will be notified of this in each relevant instance.

For Readers:

- In case you wish to reference, quote or use any of our Writers' material, we ask that you refer to the Journal d'Ambroisie in name and/or through a link, depending on your citation style.
- We also grant you permission to use our Writers' names in relevant and respectful contexts, but only if the Journal d'Ambroisie is also mentioned (see above).
- We reserve the right to take legal action, if any reference, usage or quoting of our Writers' and our Journal's material is used in a context that we consider to be obscene, offensive, illegal, or deliberately intended to upset others.
- We reserve the right to take legal action if we find the Journal's or our Writers' material on platforms (whether digital or physical) without the above mentioned referencing.

